The Col du Tourmalet is the most climbed mountain in the Tour de France history. The mountain already has been climbed more than 80 times in the Tour. In 1910 the 2115 meter high monster mountain was climbed for the first time during the 10th stage in the Tour de France.

The climb starts quite calm and builds up and the higher you get the heavier it will be. The first kilometers you cycle through the woods which still provides some shelter soon it gets heavier and you arrive beautiful views and landscapes... the question is if you can enjoy it during the steep parts. The Tourmalet can be climbed from 2 sides via the eastern side. With 7.3% average rate of increase, of which especially the last kilometers can run up to 10%. And from the west side you cover 18.6 km with 1405 altitude meters and 8 hairpin bends. You will find an average increase of 7.5%, especially here it gets heavy in the final kilometers with even a small piece of 13.5%
